

e-Stet to Showcase Managed Litigation Services and Project Management Automation Software at LegalTech New York

LOS ANGELES – JANUARY 24, 2012 – e-Stet, a specialized provider of electronic litigation technology services, announces it will showcase its Managed Litigation Services offering and LIVE, its project management automation software, at LegalTech held on January 30-February 1, 2012 in New York.

“Our goal is to provide automated solutions to the litigation technology industry,” stated Yoeli Barag, Esq., President of e-Stet. “Managed Litigation Services and LIVE are two prominent examples of our development efforts to date. We believe that both products will fundamentally transform the way in which lawyers interact with ever-increasing volumes of data, in an effort to minimize cost and maximize defensibility. The response thus far has been great.”

“We seek to eliminate the black box mentality that dominates the litigation technology industry. 2012 will demonstrate that lawyers are comfortable with the technology world, and want better visibility into how the technology they select is applied to their cases. Our offerings will help the industry take that stride.”

Managed Litigation Services transfers a client’s complete hardware and software infrastructure into e-Stet’s cloud. Under this service offering, e-Stet remains software agnostic, allowing the client to dictate its preferred software suites and hardware configurations. Managed Litigation Services provides a dedicated Tier 1 setup with full redundancy and disaster recovery mechanisms. Litigation and discovery data remain fully accessible by the client, but are fully managed by e-Stet’s team of professionals.

LIVE, a web-based project management tool, tracks cases from collection through production. Offering full client access, along with predictive billing and on-the-fly project reporting, LIVE simplifies the discovery process and provides visibility into e-Stet’s internal procedures, thereby maximizing defensibility.
